

Travel Yukon

The Yukon is home to epic landscapes, including the tallest mountain in Canada and the largest non-polar ice field in the world. Its highways make for scenic road trips, with driving on uncrowded routes to some of the most spectacular scenery on the planet.

Wildlife viewing can include large mammals like moose, caribou, mountain sheep, black bears, grizzlies and wood bison. Of course, the Yukon is also home to nature's most coveted light show: going aurora-hunting from the ground or by plane is a must-do experience. But it's not just wildlife and wilderness. Indigenous culture, a burgeoning culinary scene, thrilling outdoor adventures, historic sites and welcoming communities abound in the Land of the Midnight Sun.

Astro Tourism

Astro Tourism is now officially a thing! But with our clear, dark night skies and dancing northern lights, we’ve always been on trend. There has never been a better time for “astro tourism” in the Yukon, and here’s why.

Solar Cycle 25 marks a roughly 11-year change in the sun’s activity, which has been observed for centuries but was not clearly identified until 1843. During each cycle, levels of solar radiation and ejection of solar material, plus the number of sunspots, solar flares and coronal loops, fluctuate from a period of minimum activity to maximum activity (the “solar max”), and back again. The current solar cycle, number 25, began in December of 2019 and will reach its peak between 2023 and 2026. The uptick in solar activity during the solar max results in more aurora activity, making the current era a particularly good time for aurora viewing vacations.

While the northern lights are often associated with winter, fall in the Yukon is an equally magical time for aurora viewing. From August to October, the darkening skies of the Yukon are illuminated by the vibrant northern lights, set against the stunning backdrop of autumn colours.

AURORA GROUP TOURS:

Guided aurora viewing from the ground happens at custom-built viewing sites. Warm up in the wall tent, around the campfire or with a hot drink while you await the natural light show.

AURORA ICE FISHING:

Based in Whitehorse but operating across the territory, North Country Outdoor Adventures offers guided fishing, including fishing under the northern lights. Get on the ice just before sunset and spend the night catching fish under the dark sky, and with luck, under the aurora! Trips can include a shore dinner using the fish that you caught. All trips include local snacks, drinks, transport and a fun, easygoing atmosphere.

Indigenous Yukon

Elders say that the First Nations people have always been here. Origin stories tell of the beginning of time when Raven, Earth Mother and other powerful beings made the world safe for people, and oral traditions and archaeological evidence document the ways of Indigenous ancestors on this land for more than 12,000 years. They followed well-defined seasonal rounds, knowing the best places to hunt, fish and gather food and other resources needed throughout the year.

Today in the Yukon, 11 of the 14 Yukon First Nations have signed Self-Governing Agreements. They are responsible for their own resource management, economic and social programs, combining traditional activities on the land with entrepreneurial and administrative skills in businesses, government and tourism. Visitors receive a warm welcome at all local First Nations regional cultural centres and festivals across the Yukon.

YUKON FIRST NATIONS CULTURE AND TOURISM ASSOCIATION:

This group works on behalf of the Yukon's growing Indigenous tourism industry, representing tour operators, Cultural Centres, artists, festivals and other Indigenous experience providers. In 2023, YFNCT was proud to release "Walk With Us — Respectful Travel Guidelines," developed over three years with consultation by Elders and knowledge keepers, representing all eight language groups in the Yukon. These Guidelines, intended to help create awareness on how visitors and locals can travel with care and respect in the region while showing respectful curiosity about culture, heritage, the people, and the land, are a foundational piece of our tourism eco-system.

TAKHINI RIVER RANCH

Scott and Jackie Dickson, longtime Yukoners, own this working ranch on Ta’an Kwäch’än territory in the Takhini River Valley, located just outside of Whitehorse. Scott, a Ta’an Kwäch’än Council Member and trained butcher, oversees the farm-to-table process—from growing feed and raising animals to processing meat on-site. Their popular meat pies, smokies, and jerky, made with Yukon-sourced ingredients, are sold in Whitehorse and online. Known for their “Pigs and Rigs” catering, they plan to open a new event space and cabin rentals with panoramic wilderness views in 2025!

Tr’ondëk–Klondike UNESCO Designation

In 2023, a Yukon locale earned a coveted spot on the esteemed United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) World Heritage List.

Tr’ondëk–Klondike World Heritage site is comprised of eight distinct heritage locations in the Dawson City area: Fort Reliance; Ch’édähdëk (Forty Mile); Ch’édähdëk Tth’än K’et (Dënezhu Graveyard); Fort Cudahy and Fort Constantine; Tr’ochëk; Dawson City; Jëjik Dhä Dënezhu Kek’it (Moosehide Village); and Jëjik Dhä Tthe Zra’y Kek’it (Black City). These sites collectively total 334 hectares of land.

The unique cultural makeup of the region is the product of the coexistence of Tr’ondëk Hwëch’in and settlers over the last 150 years. The Tr’ondëk Hwëch’in experience and adaptation to European settler colonialism marked the landscape with distinct cultural heritage attributes that remain to this day.
